

TALKS ON THREE LEADING PITCHERS AND THEIR STYLES OF DELIVERY

PITCHER HOWELL OF BROWNS AMONG THE FOREMOST OF "SPIT BALL" ARTISTS. TERRY MCGOVERN MAY RETIRE TEMPORARILY FROM THE RING

WRITTEN FOR THE SUNDAY REPUBLIC.

"Howling Harry" Howell bids fair to become Jack Chesbro's rival in the mastery of the mysterious "spit" ball. This St. Louis pitcher has studied the expectation drop and has developed it to an extent that surpasses his most ardent admirers.

Howell is a close student of baseball and he has seen the advantage of this new delivery.

When Chesbro was here Howell was constantly studying him with the result that he now classes with Jack in the art of throwing this fearsome pitching kink.

Harry thinks that the "spit" ball is the greatest delivery ever discovered in pitching and Harry's views are endorsed by all the players of both the major leagues.

See other pitcher delivers a more mystic.

Young assortment of knicks than Howell. He has the full control of the new curve, he should make one of the greatest pitchers in the galaxy of American League twirlers.

Long ago, while Howell was a member of the Baltimore Club, he had a slight knowledge of the wonderful "spit" ball. He learned it from a fellow player, like other major league pitchers, but he did not use it with the power it possesses.

Chesbro was the first to introduce it into the major league, and his success was so startling that other pitchers began to study Chesbro's methods. Few were successful in copying the famous delivery, and so the "spit" ball was considered a secret.

Since Chesbro began to use it, it has become a part of the game. It is now used by many pitchers, but Howell is the only one who has mastered it to the point where he can control it with the effect that Howell does.

COAST TWILERS' DELIVERY

Jack Chesbro's connection with the ball has many fans to believe that he is the inventor of the wonderful curve. But it is not the case. Elmer Strickland, a coast league twirler, originated the curve, and it was Howell who made it famous.

When Strickland began to use the ball, he had a habit of waiting the first two fingers of his right hand, one day he was surprised to find that he had a habit of waiting the first two fingers of his right hand, one day he was surprised to find that he had a habit of waiting the first two fingers of his right hand.

When the ball hit his hand it took the same course as any other curve. He was not the first to use it, but he was the first to make it famous.

"The Japanese are great ball players, and they are true sportsmen. Even the umpire is safe over there. They never dispute decisions, and when the game is over they treat their opponents with great respect. They are in their schools, at least many of them, have been educated in the universities over here, and probably introduced the spit over there. And the people have taken to it readily. They are not good at football, being it wasn't a difficult catch at all, for the ball kept in the air.

A moment later a low one came whistling over second. I darted in for it as fast as I could go, but had to take a long swing to keep the ball from touching the ground. I got it about six inches above the grass. I slid along for ten or fifteen feet. It was fifty times a more difficult catch than the other, but I never got a hand."

"Nothing is true of infield plays," said Eberfeld. "I ran over to second one day in Philadelphia to take a throw from the pitcher, and the umpire flew in my right eye as I started, and reaching second, I turned my back on the ball and threw out to some extent, Daugherty's case was due to the terrible work he had to undergo when opposing McGovern. Terry was the larger and heavier of the pair, but Daugherty had been chosen as his sparring partner because of his clever style of boxing and the quickness he displayed on his feet.

Danny always made good in the stage bouts, but the greater force behind the punches of McGovern told in the long run. He committed to weakness under the strain and was never the same man after his two battles with Harry Purser. It was the theatrical work that broke him down, more than anything else. He recovered almost instantly as soon as he left the ring and has done nicely in various bouts since that time.

Joe Bernstein, one of the starlight fighters of his weight that appeared in the local ring, suffered by going on the stage and taking up wrestling as a means of exhibition. This constant strain on his muscles told in time and he lost some of his speed, besides being affected to some extent by the same causes which have injured Terry's health.

Other men have sustained setbacks in their training through the same causes, and it may be that Terry's breakdown is but temporary. He certainly did not seem to be in bad trim, and it is believed that his stay at the Springs has put him back on the road to health.

JAMES WHITE'S RECORD

While many scathing comments have been made about British fighters, who have come to this country and made in different showings, the record of James White seems to indicate that he can hold his own, at least, in the battle for which he is scheduled to fight.

While holding a better position in his own class than Andy Tokell did when the latter came to this country, Tokell was a good man in his own class, but he was not a champion in much of the same way that James White is in his class. He is a champion in the middleweight class, which is a position in his own class that he has held since he came to this country.

He did not stand out prominently in his class as a champion, but he did among the bantams, after the two fights Harry won in this city. He simply was a good, sturdy fighter of the 110-pound class. Yet he put up a battle at Detroit that was said to be one of the best ever witnessed in that city, and Forbes was unable to put him in his own division in England, he saved decided in a few hours. Consequently a ball player is as near physical perfection as can be in the middle of a season as can a soldier in the middle of a campaign.

The game demands a perfect athlete. From head to foot he is a model of what conscientious training should develop.

There is not a muscle of the body that is not brought into action. The game affords as to other sports a combination of all that goes to make athletic perfection.

And that means that the head is brought into play. And brain work means concentration, the ability to take advantage of opportunities and the mind to create before the other fellow. The ball player, with the good hands, all other conditions being equal, invariably proves the best of the winners. It is so today and has been so since the game was first played.

It is the brainy fellows, too, that are remembered. Players like Mike Kelly, Buck Ewing, Tim Lincecum, Charley Hazen, John Ward and others who used their heads in direct combination with the physical attributes of the game, are the ones who are remembered. ly should furnish a good battle over here. He has dropped the stereotyped English style of leading with the left and trying to land the decisive blow with the right, and has, instead, developed the use of both hands to a high pitch.

To use weapons of this ability to adapt himself to conditions, a brighter prospect is in store than for those who merely use the traditional blows of the English ring. Tokell used both hands and put up a great fight. If White can make an equally good showing, it will indicate that the British fighter is coming to improve in ability. And White ought to do this, as he is admittedly champion of his class on the other side of the water while Tokell was always regarded as being of less ability than Jim Fowler, the little fighter who won from Frankie Neil.

Stung up the situation, it seems as if White may be the first of the British victors to prove really important in the American end of the game.

INTEREST IN MATCH

If Marvin Hart and Jim Jeffries got together it does not seem likely that any such interest will be aroused in the match as was created by previous battles of the champion. Big houses can always be obtained in a real battle. But the gate receipts are not going to run into the thousands as they have in former days.

Jeffries seems to have too much edge over his opponents, and he has had over previous antagonists, in weight, height, strength and general development. He will lower over Hart just as much as he has done over other contestants and it does not look as though Marvin could overcome the British champion. From all appearances, the fight will be generally conceded to Jeffries if ever it should be arranged.

Much comment has been expended upon certain well-known athletes of the colleges as to whether they could be successfully trained to oppose Jeffries. With college men breaking into professional boxing and other sports, it would seem that they would not overlook pugilism, which pays such immense profits if man is successful, but which is such a bitter career if a man is of mediocre talent.

The fact that none of them have taken up the game is significant in itself. The college men would not be apt to shirk from the training, but they would not be apt to take it seriously. They would not be apt to take it seriously.

Jeffries is not likely to be endangered in his position by any of the college element. For it would require far more years than the college men have to develop a man to the high degree required by the modern ring.

Jack McKenna, manager and manager of pugilism, and who at one time looked after the interests of Abe Attell and Johnny Sorenson, will look toward developing a man to the high degree required by the modern ring.
